DIRECTOR'S MESSAGE

Simrita Singh

Dear Children, Black, white, rich or poor, We are all from the one source. The same power that directs the movements of the planets and the changing seasons flow through all of us. We are all connected. What we give out to the world, will come back to us. So children do everything with a good intent and you will then reap a rich harvest of good deeds. When next you admire nature's bounty, know that this too is how you really are. Happy Dussehra.

Principal's Message

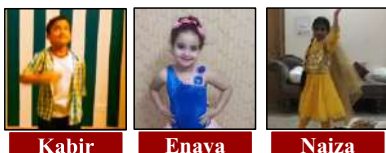

Dr. Ekta Dhawan

Dear Readers
We bid adieu to the solemn September and welcome the festive October, the harbinger of festivities with open arms. May this festive season spread happiness and prosperity in our society! May we be illumined by richer understanding and mutual growth! Let the ignorance and inner darkness be dispelled this festive season. From the deepest encryptions of my heart, I wish each of my student rediscover the value of his existence at individual, family, social and mother nature's level. I hope you all shall be empowered to make a distinction between the upright and righteous from wrong and evil. I shall take a moment to congratulate all my students who brought laurels to the school. Various interschool, state & national level competitions have been a germination ground for our students as each of the contest leaves the students more sophisticated, more cultured and more sentient to be responsible global citizens.

Congratulate the parents for responsible parenting. You have been very supportive. Through this column I send my prayers and best wishes for the upcoming examinations to all the students. Wish you all the very best. God Bless Us All!!!

Annual Sports Meet: A Saga of Sweat and Passion

For comprehensive and extensive development, physical well being is very crucial. We have a well planned curriculum and follow specially designed sessions for the physical development of our students. Sports meet is one of those events which fan the passion, grit and courage in our students. An exemplary sportsman spirit, courage and meticulous planning were reflected during this sports meet. The students from Grade I-VIII registered themselves in various track & field events and team competitions. Sports Day and physical activities contribute to the development of the whole child in a plethora of ways e.g. health, physical and emotional well-being, cognitive and social development. Sport in the school environment can be a positive influence on lifelong participation in sport and physical activity. This exposure to Athletics and court games is a part of an initiative designed to help young students to improve their physical fitness & helps increase cognitive control. These competitive activities at the top of the day rejuvenate the young Students. School propagates Running and sprinting in particular. These fundamental skills support a multitude of other activities. When young students learn how to sprint properly, they're more likely to enjoy a wide range of sports and activities. Students have to participate in school sports to increase confidence, mental alertness, and self-esteem. Sports are important in schools because it helps to teach various skills to students like leadership, patience, patience, team efforts, and social skills. Kudos to all the achievers.
